

A VISION SHARED

"I believe that landscape architecture and architecture working seamlessly together create an environment that promotes well-being." —Rick Sundberg

Landscape architect Scott Murase, architect Rick Sundberg, and civil engineer Ralph Iboshi are combining expertise and artistry to create an environment of well-being for our seniors. They offer our community an enduring gift for the Seattle Keiro Garden Project.

Murase, an award-winning designer, expressed, "My hope is that this garden will add a sense of serenity, calm and peacefulness to Keiro's surroundings," says Murase. Keiro's commitment to the quality of life of its seniors inspired him.

Sundberg, architect of the Wing Luke Asian Museum, embraced the vision as well, providing a building design that allows the viewer to have a connection to the garden from the inside. "I like to work where the nature of the community is strong," says Sundberg.
